The state of Qi, fourth century BC

淳于髡一日而見七人於宣王。

In one day, Chunyu Kun presented seven men to King Xuan.

Zhanguo ce (Strategies of the Warring States), Qi 3.
English: lecturer

Emperor Huizong of Song, Auspicious Cranes, 1112, detail.
Liaoning Provincial Museum. Wikimedia Commons, public domain

Emperor Huizong of Song, Auspicious Cranes, 1112, detail.
Liaoning Provincial Museum. Wikimedia Commons, public domain

King Xuan of Qi

reigned 319 to 301 BC

千里而一士，是比肩而立；
百世而一聖，若隨踵而至也。
今子一朝而見七士，
則士不亦眾乎？

One scholar in a thousand li counts as shoulder to shoulder; one sage in a hundred generations, as heel on heel. You present seven scholars in one morning. Are scholars so many, then?

Zhanguo ce (Strategies of the Warring States), Qi 3.
English: lecturer

Chunyu Kun

c. 386 to 310 BC

不然。 Not so.

夫鳥同翼者而聚居，

Birds with the same wings live together.

獸同足者而俱行。

Beasts with the same feet walk together.

Zhanguo ce (Strategies of the Warring States), Qi 3.
English: lecturer

Emperor Huizong of Song, Auspicious Cranes, 1112, detail.
Liaoning Provincial Museum. Wikimedia Commons, public domain

夫物各有疇，今髡賢者之疇也。

王求士於髡，譬若挹水於河，而取火於燧也。

Things each have their kind, and I, Kun, am of the kind of the worthy. Your Majesty seeking scholars from me is like drawing water from a river, or taking fire from a fire-drill.

髡將復見之，豈特七士也。

I will present more. Why only seven scholars?

Emperor Huizong of Song, Auspicious Cranes, 1112, detail. Liaoning Provincial Museum. Wikimedia Commons, public domain

Weekend 2, block 1

The inner product and nearest neighbors

鳥	birds
同翼	the same wings
聚居	live together
求士於髡	seeking scholars from Kun

Emperor Huizong of Song, Auspicious Cranes, 1112, detail.
Liaoning Provincial Museum. Wikimedia Commons, public domain

Customers

Similar ratings

measured by the inner product

Nearest neighbors

A prediction

copy the nearest neighbor's rating